Vivid War Scenes Amply
Atone for Lapses.

While "Civilization" attends to business it is probably the greatest monor between the said of the films as it is probably the greatest more clearly demonstrated than last night at the Criterion Theatre. Pictorially "Civilization" is gigantic. Its battle seenes are something more than wonderful; they are terrific. They are so terrific that they encompass and blot out the film's defects, and the net result is that the picture is a huge winner. Unless the competition to come is possessed of unexpected strength "Civilization" will remain at the Criterion all summer and all winter.

It is only occasionally that a bad play can be turned into a success by skiffed direction, but such a procedure is an everyday occurrence in the films.

It is only occasionally that a bad play can be turned into a success by skilful direction, but such a procedure is an everyday occurrence in the films. The success of "Civilization" is attributable solely to Thomas H. Ince, who produced it. So far as the experiences of the present reviewer are concerned, the vivid succession of smashing, rending, tearing battle scenes which make up the first part of the picture never have been equalled in any film. If Mr. Ince has erred it is in making these scenes so impressive that the second part of the film cannot but come as an anti-climax. Even this error can be laid at the feet of the author, however, who should have written a story that would have made it possible for Mr. Ince to put these scenes where they belonged.

Alas, the poor author! The programme announced that the story was written by C. Gardner Sullivan, but it was more likely Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Wheever it was, he or she made a fundamental error in endeavoring to set the passions of individuals against so huge a background, where they would Inevitably look ridiculous. On top of this was piled a rather sickly allegory, and the sticky, pax vobiscum captions suggested such a flapping of angels wings that one looked a second time at thelady ushers on the way o ut, and somehow felt that they were really celestial delegates in disguise.

Mr. Ince, however, applied himself dilgently to the task at which Mr. Sullivan had foozled, and did his work on the task at which Mr. Sullivan had foozled, and did his work on tear mothers away from their sons final clasps; a single bomb dropped from an airship does not leven an entire city block, and a huge warship cannot be made absolutely to disappear by a solitary missive from even the most in court John Grant Lyman, querill of guns. The pictorial effect. GREATEST FEATURE of these things, however, is tremen-

Ward and West Side People Fight Recession Move in Hudson.

Park Commissioner Ward and representatives of West Side civic organizations appeared yesterday before the New York Harbor Line Board to protest against granting the New York Central Railroad a recession of the bulkhead line in the Hudson from 142d to 153d Street and a compensating advancement from 133d to 142d street. The hearing was conducted by Dock Commissioner Smith.

Commissioner Smith said owners of $2,000,000 worth of motor boats required docking facilities and frontage for docks and wharves. A recession of the bulkhead line, he thought, was almost imperative.
